MR. BELL INVENTS THE TELEPHONE

Stay at the elbow of Alexander Graham Bell, as he teaches deaf people lip reading to earn the money to experiment in his free hours on a new type of wireless. Be on hand as he sacrifices his health to put in endless hours on a project that will not seem to work. Hear him tell his assistant about another idea he has, to transmit the sound of speech across wires. Enjoy with him that moment of success—then the fight to make people understand the importance of his great invention. Finally, hear the moment when the telephone spans the continent, from New York to California, and a new era in world communication begins.

GEORGE WASHINGTON CARVER

Hear the fury of marauders, who steal a slave girl and her child from their white masters... the cries of the baby, rescued and brought back to Mose Carver and his wife on their farm. Hear the hungry desire for education voiced by negroes in the north and south, and the almost insurmountable pitfalls George Washington Carver faced as he worked—and walked—his way to finish college and become a naturalist. Go with Carver to address a committee of Congress, and be with him when he finds the solution to the soil problem of the south. Mr. Peanut triumphs over King Cotton! Meet two great Negro leaders—George Washington Carver and Booker T. Washington. Thrill to the real substance and meaning of education.
